Dear Sir:

I have known Jeff Perrotte for three years now, after reading an article in 2004 and learning who he is. His story is a very compelling one.

He is a man full of remorse for the life he took and the pain he caused. Jeff is a man of great strength, humility, and has a respect for mankind. He has a wonderful family who he misses very much.

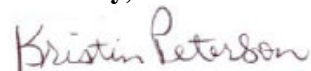

He has worked diligently to rehabilitate himself. While in prison, he has received his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, an MBA, and a Doctorate in Business Administration, all with a 4.0 Grade Point Average and making the Deans List. He has learned many Vocational Programs and self help programs while in prison. He is always seeking to improve himself and to set an example especially for his children and to others. But most importantly he has contributed through his awareness website: www.drinkdriveprison.com

It shows people the importance of not to drink and drive, and how one's life can be altered severely by one bad decision. His website has been seen and used by hundreds of thousands of people on drinking and driving and the perils it can cause.

Jeff has also contributed to Society greatly through his articles he has written on the dangers of drinking and driving which have been published throughout the country, and used at facilities like The Betty Ford Center. They were written to train others, and hopefully to save lives. Jeff has received countless letters from people who have vowed to never drink and drive again. One letter in particular from the U.S. Department of Transportation Chief, Impaired Driving Division, Heidi Coleman, who sent a note to Jeff thanking him for trying to help others to not drink and drive.

Jeff has accomplished more in the 15 years in prison than most people have done in a lifetime. I am so impressed with Jeff's growth and progress, his passion for life, and his ability and desire to improve the lives of others as well as his own. Jeff has grown enormously. Jeff would be such a great contribution to society outside of prison through his work in helping others to not drink and drive. I hope that you will consider the release of Jeff Perrotte. The enormous impact Jeff would have on the world outside is unlimited.....not to mention to his family and friends.

Sincerely,

Kristin Peterson
